Mussolini Says Force of Arms Is Great But Heart Decision Greater

"WE WILL PROVE IT"

Lays Down New Series of Measures to Render Army "Entirely Ready"

By International News Service
ROME, May 9.—In a brief but militant address, Premier Mussolini warned the world today that Italian determination will see the nation through any emergency.

Speaking to officers at a parade of Italy's armed forces, Il Duce declared: "The force of arms is great, but greater still is the decision of our hearts."

"When the hour comes, we will prove it."

Earlier Mussolini gave added force to the newly concluded Italo-German military alliance by laying down fresh series of measures designed to render the Italian army "entirely ready" for any contingency.

Il Duce pushed through the new laws at a meeting of the Superior Defense Council, which considered in detail the full implications of the Italo-German armed alliance.

Travelling Gavel Is Presented at Hulmeville

HULMEVILLE, May 9.—The Travelling Gavel was brought to Ladies' Auxiliary of William Penn Fire Company, last evening, by members of Perkashie Auxiliary, 183 women gathering in the fire station, here, for the social affair. The assemblage was comprised of members of more than a dozen Auxiliaries.

Hulmeville Auxiliary held a brief business meeting, with Miss Margaret Perry presiding, plans being made for the card party on May 19th.

Mrs. Emma Gehman, Quakertown, president of the Auxiliary of the Bucks County Firemen's Association, was present, and there was roll call of organizations. The president of Perkashie Auxiliary presented the gavel to Miss Perry, and the local Auxiliary will take the same to Sellersville in October.

The entertainment of the evening was thoroughly enjoyable, it being arranged by Mrs. Lynn Shatzer, Mrs. Howard Potter, Mrs. Lillie Mullen and Miss Perry. A tap dance was performed by Miss Helene Blackburn; selection on electric guitar, Misses Ethel Vornhold and Evelyn Thorpe.

A mock wedding was staged, participants including: Mr. and Mrs. Olden D. Creppitt, grandparents of the bride, Mrs. William Perry and Mrs. Louis Barton; Mr. and Mrs. Lucifer Long, parents of the groom, Mrs. L. Saenz and Mrs. Mullen; mother of the bride, Mrs. Orlovski; bride's little sister, Mrs. Rose Baker; Mahatma, Ghandi, Mrs. Charles Smith; Tillie Newfont, soloist, Mrs. William Wheeler; Deacon Tiemp, the preacher, Mrs. Robert Brien, Sr.; Ezekiah Snifer, the best man, Mrs. Shatzer; Slim Long, the groom, Mrs. Howard Potter; Fannie Rump, the bridesmaid, Mrs. Arthur Martindell; Little Rosebud, the flower girl, Mrs. Charles Thorpe, Sr.; Unconscious O'Nally, the ring bearer, Miss Perry; Lena Little, the bride, Miss Elizabeth McKay, Leviathan Little, the bride's father, Mrs. William Vornhold; announcer, Miss Marie Hanson; usher, Mrs. Harold Daseburg.

Refreshments of ice cream, pretzels, cake and coffee were served, the committee consisting of Mrs. William Vornhold, Mrs. Mary Alcorn, Mrs. Jones, Mrs. James Tracy.

WEST BRISTOL

Mr. and Mrs. John Corrigan have moved from West Bristol to Harrison street.

The week-end was passed by Miss Rose Corrigan, Philadelphia, at the home of her mother, Mrs. Thomas Corrigan.

A special program is arranged for Mother's Day at Newport Road Community Chapel at 10:30 a. m. The young people's choir will give special selections, and children will recite. There will be gifts for the mothers attending.

Jack McDaniel and a party of friends motored to Asbury Park, N. J., one day last week.

FALLSINGTON

William Beckman, formerly of Fallsington, now of Trenton, N. J., is touring the South.

Mrs. Russell Rymer and children, Newburgh, N. Y., are visiting Mrs. Rymer's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Hartman.

Thomas Archibley, Linden, N. J., was a recent visitor of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Klockner.

FINAL MEETING

The last meeting for the season of the Mothers' Association will be held tomorrow evening in the high school auditorium. Those having tickets from the card party or sashet counters are asked to return such or money for the same.

Blind Man Expects To Be Released From Penitentiary

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—(INS)—By the end of this month, Norman Morrison, 40-year-old blind Eastern Penitentiary prisoner serving a life term for murder, hopes to be free so that he may teach others suffering similar affliction to read Braille.

A petition asking the State Pardon Board to release him so that he may devote his life to teaching in a school for the blind, was presented recently in Morrison's behalf.

A single shot fired by his own hand on July 12, 1936, caused Morrison, a former resident of Carlisle, Pa., to lose his sight. In a fit of jealousy he shot and killed Mrs. Frances Bowermaster McBride when she refused to marry him. Then he made an unsuccessful attempt to end his own life.

"After the tragedy I lay in a hospital not knowing I was going to be blind for the rest of my life," Morrison said. "I did not realize what I had done."

"When I was taken to the Harrisburg State Hospital where I was confined for three years, I decided that I would repay society for my sin by devoting the rest of my life to helping blind people enjoy their lives as much as possible."

Morrison was sent to Eastern State Penitentiary in 1929 and, with the knowledge acquired at Harrisburg, gave himself the equivalent of a college education by his finger-reading. He also invented a device making Braille reading easier, and hopes to make the invention available to fellow sufferers.

THINK ASSOCIATION IS FORGETTING ITS PURPOSE

Many Members of Opinion That Too Many Topics Are Being Considered

WANT PLANNING, ZONING

DOYLESTOWN, May 9.—Unless it sticks to its big objective and to the main purpose for which it was organized, many individuals are of the opinion that the Bucks County Association Committee of '76 will fast become a useless and unnecessary organization.

At a meeting held in the Court House, Friday evening, numerous things were discussed while planning and zoning rated little more than a small "plug." For instance there was much discussion about the merit system.

Henry D. Paxson, Jr., Hollencamp, attorney, told the group that although he believed the merit system to be a good thing, he failed to see the point in putting the merit system before the Bucks County Association for discussion when zoning and planning is the main issue of the group.

"People in authority are getting the wrong opinion of this association entirely," Mr. Paxson declared. "They are going to get the idea that we are showing them how to put their own home in order. Personally, I am opposed to this association taking definite action on the merit system."

The next item discussed was a report on billboards made by Mrs. Cyril G. Fox, chairman of the Eastern Division for Roadside Improvement, and read in her absence, by Mrs. Woolley.

"Highway halitosis is the term recently applied to the condition of the roadsides in Pennsylvania," Mrs. Woolley pointed out. The report in part:

"The Garden Club Federation, State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, Council for the Federation of Natural Beauty in Pennsylvania, Philadelphia Federation of Women's Clubs and allied organizations and the Pennsylvania Co-operating Conservation Councils are co-operating to eliminate the unsightly structures on the highways and in particular the billboards."

"From these organizations have been formed the 'Blot of the Month Club,' which is meeting with great success. The press has been a great aid. The chief aim of this movement is to get people thinking about highway conditions. When they realize fully what has happened to their unprotected investment of $500,000,000 in state and county roads, the demands for suitable action will be so overwhelming that the efforts of the powerful and expensive billboard lobby entrenched in Harrisburg will eventually be overcome."

"With enlightened public opinion and the press on our side we need not concern ourselves too much with the mis-statements and pitiful attempts of the Outdoor Advertising Companies to befuddle the people of this State. In true characteristic fashion the organized billboard industry has set up a defense mechanism in Pennsylvania. The Outdoor Advertising Association has entirely disregarded and are violating their own voluntary regulations."

"As for cleaning up the rural highways, do not lose sight of the already existing law, the County Zoning Enabling Act which gives power to regulate in any portion of the county outside the cities, boroughs and townships of the first class, the location, height, bulk and size of billboard and

Here and There in Bucks County Towns

Under the supervision of County Superintendent J. H. Hogman, 40 boys and girls, representing nine Bucks county schools, took the State scholarship examinations in the Doylestown high school Friday.

The schools and the number of pupils who competed are as follows: Bensalem Township Schools, 4; Buckingham Township, 8; Doylestown, 7; New Hope, 3; Newtown, 2; Quakertown, 6; Sellersville-Perkasie, 5; Yardley, 2; and George School, a private school, 3.

The annual joint district meeting of American Legions and their auxiliaries of Bucks and Montgomery Counties will be held in the Norris-town Armory at eight p. m. on May 10.

Department Commander Frank Gwynn, of Allentown, and Department President, Mrs. James B. Casey, Jr., will be the principal speakers. Dinner will be served at Bungalow Inn, on Ridge Pike, Jeffersonville, at 6.15, preceding the evening session.

Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Wilson Stoneback were congratulated by their many friends on their 58th wedding anniversary which was celebrated quietly at their home, 100 East Broad street, Quakertown.

They were presented many gifts. Mr. Stoneback is 80 years old and his wife is 76 years old.

Mr. and Mrs. Stoneback were married in the Methodist Episcopal Church, at Quakertown, April 30, 1881, and have lived in Quakertown for the past 56 years. The first two years of their married life were spent in West Rockhill township and in Doylestown.

They have three children, Edwin and Paul, both of Quakertown, and Jennie, who for the past ten years was engaged in missionary work in Chicago, Ill. At present, she is on vacation and is living with her parents. There are, in addition to the children, seven grandchildren.

Mr. Stoneback has been in the contracting business for the past 60 years.

Excitement on the part of the individual who called the Fountainville fire company and mis-directed the Doylestown firemen probably prevented the saving of a barn on the property of H. G. Black, on Ferry Road, west of Fountainville, it is said.

Fire, which broke out about 10 o'clock, Saturday, when sparks ignited the structure, completely destroyed the barn, although three companies, Doylestown, Dublin and Chalfont, had been called to fight the blaze.

DOYLESTOWN SCHOOL TAX IS SET AT 12 MILLS

Married Women Teachers Are Not Given Increments Except One for Special Units

ELECT NEW TEACHERS

DOYLESTOWN, May 9.—The school tax rate has been fixed at 12 mills and the per capita tax at $3, the same as last year, by the borough school board. A budget of $112,900 has been adopted.

Two teachers, both of whom are present members of the school system, were elected as regular teachers. They include Mrs. Mabel McCord Elliott who was elected at a salary of $1400, and Miss Mary A. Rufe, who has served her internship and was elected at a salary of $1300.

Director Frank Mitch, who is opposed to employing married women teachers, went on record as opposing the election of Mrs. Elliott, of West Chester, who served as a substitute teacher this year.

Supervising Principal J. Leonard Halderman submitted the resignation of Thomas J. Keating, who will continue his fellowship for a second year at the Vineland Training School, and two other members of the faculty.

To avoid having his office flooded with applications and embarrassing the two teachers, who are leaving, the names of the teachers and the vacancies in the departments are being withheld.

Following the single salary schedule, which was adopted by the board under the direction of Supervising Principal Halderman, each teacher, with the exception of one high school teacher, the school nurse, and the married women teachers, were granted an increment.

The increments range from an increase of $100 in salary up to $1700, and an increase of $50 in salary up to

Want A White Line

(By "The Stroller")

Since the one-way traffic regulations have become effective in the business area a number of motorists have suggested that a white line should be painted across Route 13 on both sides of the intersection of Market street.

The motorists claim that the traffic light at this point is located in the center of Route 13 and that if cars are stopped on Route 13 too close to the light, motorists coming out of Market street have difficulty in making the turn onto Route 13.

The owner of the property, which has been restored into a lovely summer home, lives in Philadelphia where he is connected with a shipping firm.

E. A. Simons and family, who have been residing in the farm house, expected to move next week.

The barn became ignited when a spark fanned by a breeze fell on the roof which in a short time became a mass of flames. A car which was in the barn was saved.

There was no livestock in the barn, but a hay-tedder and some other equipment was consumed in the fire.

OLD YARDLEY BANK TO PAY DEPOSITORS IN FULL

Final Dividend Checks Will Be Ready In A Few Days

ASSETS ALL LIQUIDATED

YARDLEY, May 9.—Major Stanley W. Root, receiver of the Yardley National Bank, today announced he had completed and forwarded to the office of the Comptroller of the Currency, Washington, D. C., for signature, dividend checks for the final payment of 10 per cent, plus an interest payment of 3.95 per cent to all depositors of the bank who have properly proved their claims. This payment will bring the recovery to the creditors of the bank to 100 per cent of the principal of their claims, and in addition thereto, a payment of 3.95 per cent as interest.

All the assets of this bank have now been liquidated. Major Root said this dividend distribution will amount to $36,152.26 and consists of approximately 1,200 checks which together with approximately 300 checks still held from prior dividends, must be distributed before June 30. After that date, all undivided dividend checks will be sent to the Comptroller of the Currency and the Yardley National Bank receivership will be officially terminated.

Any creditor of the bank not calling for his check before June 30, will have to communicate with the comptroller's office in Washington, in order to receive his dividend.

The checks will be distributed at the office of the new Yardley National Bank.

TULLYTOWN, May 9.—In honor of her birthday anniversary, Mrs. Elmina Gillingham, Main street, was honored by her daughter, Mrs. Walter Strouse, Saturday evening, at her home. A supper was served at this surprise affair, several of Mrs. Gillingham's friends being invited for the occasion. Gifts were presented to the honored guest.

THE GREAT GAME OF POLITICS

By FRANK R. KENT

"Distributed by McNaught Syndicate, Inc."

About The Secretaries

Washington, May 8. ALMOST any time now the President will announce the names of the six additional $10,000 White House secretaries authorized by the recently enacted Reorganization Act. Also as soon as Congress ratifies his regrouping recommendation he will name the heads of the three new Federal agencies—the Federal Works Agency, the Federal Loan Agency and the Federal Security Agency.

THUS, within a short space, Mr. Roosevelt has nine conspicuous and important posts to fill in which there is—or at any rate ought to be—keen public interest. So far as the heads of the new agencies are concerned, it is expected Colonel Harrington will head the Works Agency; Mr. Alt-meyer, now chairman of the Social Security Board, the Security Agency, and Mr. Jesse Jones, of the RFC, the Loan Agency. All three are natural and logical selections. It is, however, interesting that while the first two will reflect the President's personal choice, the latter—that of Mr. Jones—will have been more or less forced on him by the significant demonstration of public and Congressional resentment over the original Presidential intention of side-tracking a man who had done one of the best jobs of anyone in the whole Administration.

AS for the six secretaries, if Mr. Roosevelt yet knows whom he will name it has not leaked out. Congress authorized these six secretaries not because it was convinced of the need of them but because the anti-Administration leaders, having thoroughly emasculated

Stockham Resolution

HARRISBURG, May 9.—The Senate today had a resolution of Representative Thomas B. Stockham, Republican, Bucks, requesting the attorney general to undertake a study of public utility laws of Pennsylvania and other states. The House last night gave its approval to the resolution by a vote of 122 to 66.

Representative Elmer J. Holland, Democrat, Allegheny, offered amendments to have the investigation include a study of the amount of taxes paid by public utilities on real estate in other states. "This amendment is not necessary," said Stockham, who is chairman of the House Utility Committee. "The resolution is all inclusive."

Th Holland amendment was voted down.

Two Ask for Pardons

HARRISBURG, May 9.—A full calendar of 98 cases today faced the State Board of Pardons when it meets May 18-19. The two-day session will mark the first appearance as a board member of William S. Livengood, Jr., recently sworn as secretary of internal affairs. Among the hearings, including sentencing date, listed were:

Bucks County—Charles O. Edwards, Sept., 1931, robbery and other charges; Giacomo Gucciardo, Dec., 1929, murder, first degree.

Six In Bridge Crash

PHILADELPHIA, May 9.—Six passengers were recovering today from injuries received when a Mount Holly bound bus in which they were riding telescoped into two others on the Delaware River Bridge.

Twelve other persons were shaken up but none was seriously hurt when a Philadelphia to New York bus swerved to avoid hitting a stalled bus, causing the pile-up.

Residents of New Jersey treated at Hahnemann Hospital in Philadelphia for minor ailments and discharged were:

Frank Powers, 34, of 522 S. Cedar avenue, Maple Shade, N. J., fractured jaw and cut lip; Martin Egan, 29, of 54 Cedar avenue, Maple Shade, shock; Frank Mack, 27, of 4198 Federal street, Camden, cut chin; Frank Anastasi, 27, of Woodland Road, Mount Holly, cut face, and Dr. J. A. Hines, 73, of 37 Pine street, Mount Holly, cuts and shock.

Playground Activities Now Getting Under Way

Playground activities have been started on the Leedom Field and the Beaver street school grounds under the supervision of WPA Education and Recreation leadership.

Activities for children and adults, including softball, baseball, volleyball, tennis, quoits, and various low organized games, will be conducted from 2.30 to 5.30 and six to 8.30 p. m., every day except Saturday and Sunday.

Play equipment for Leedom's Field is being contributed by the Bristol Community Center.

These playgrounds are introduced only as preliminary to the formal opening of WPA supervised play centers expected soon after school closing.

Advises Motorists How To View the Fleet at New York

"The Fleet's In"—according to Walter N. White, travel bureau manager of The Automobile Club of Philadelphia, who has just returned from seeing it and the World's Fair, along with hundreds of other A.A.A. travel officials who attended annual sessions in New York this week.

The Fleet is expected to stay until May 17, with the battleships and heavy cruisers stationed on the Hudson River from Sixtieth Street to Yonkers, while the lighter vessels will be disposed at piers through the city. They are open free to the public from 1 to 6 p. m. daily and Sundays. The best way to view the Fleet is from New Jersey's Skyline Drive, State Route No. 203 recently marked by the New Jersey Highway authorities, which in addition provides a thrilling way to view New York in panorama.

Follow U. S. Route No. 9 from the Pulaski Highway to Manhattan Avenue, Bear right on Manhattan Avenue and follow the marked signs to the approach of the Lincoln Tunnel. At this point continue straight ahead on the Hudson Boulevard to the Skyline Drive, and proceed along the west bank of the Hudson River, where you will view the fleet, to Alpine. Cross the river and come south along the east bank, following Riverdale Avenue, then the Henry Hudson Parkway and West Street. From this side you can park your car at the various piers and inspect the vessels.

RESCUE SQUAD MAKING DRIVE TO RAISE FUNDS

Endeavoring to Raise Sufficient Money to Pay for Ambulance and Operating Costs

ASK PUBLIC TO DONATE

The Croydon Station of the Bucks County Rescue Squad has just started the annual drive for funds, members making a house to house collection. The new ambulance just purchased cost $2895, and the squad would like to raise enough to make one year's payment on it, which is $647.28; plus enough to cover one year's operating expenses which will run about $1000 for the station and the two ambulances.

The members of the Station are working very hard on this drive, and would like the public to be as liberal as possible. All advertising and magazine campaigns have stopped.

A list of the names together with the amount each gives will be published after each collection, so that everyone can keep in touch with the campaign to raise these funds.

There will be no collections made on Saturday and Sunday, May 13th and 14th.

"Remember the station is your station and help them to help others," is the slogan.

The following was collected Saturday, May 6th, from the people of Torresdale Manor and the lower end of Andalusia:

COUNCIL DETERMINED TO COLLECT UNPAID WATER ACCOUNTS

Orders Notices Be Sent to Each Delinquent and Supply Shut Off if Payment is Not Made

BOROUGH NEEDS MONEY

Some Councilmen Urge The Publication of List of Those Owing Water Bills

APPROVES TRAFFIC PLAN

Bristol, Pa., April 26, 1939.
Mr. Clifford L. Anderson, Bristol, Pa.
Dear Sir:

At the last meeting of the Bristol Exchange Club, a resolution was passed relative to the new traffic regulations, passed and put into effect by the Borough Council.

The Exchange Club commends the new system and extends to you as Burgess, and to Council, our congratulations and appreciation for the completion of a definite civic improvement.

Respectfully yours,
CHARLES F. BOYD,
Secretary.

With delinquent water accounts totalling $34,892.39 Borough Council last night took action which indicates that drastic measures are to be employed to make those in arrears pay up their delinquency.

The amount owing to the Borough by water consumers was discussed pro and con by the councilmen, but all seemed to be of one opinion that now the time had come to collect these bills. The Borough needs the money and as it was expressed last night "some think that because the other fellow doesn't pay that they do not have to pay either."

The councilmen looked over the list of names of those who owe water rents. One councilman said "I was certainly surprised to find the names of some people on that list."

"Publish the names of those who are delinquent and then shut off the water," suggested one. To this suggestion some said it couldn't be done as it would be a menace to health. "It is done elsewhere," commented another. "I know definitely that water is shut off in certain sections of Philadelphia by a private water company when the bills are not paid," argued another.

Finally council without

Think Association Is Forgetting Its Purpose

other structures and the uses of buildings and other structures.

"It is just plain common sense to avail ourselves of the protective powers set up for us which can be had for the asking, provided, of course, we ask loud enough and persistently enough for our County Commissioners to stop, look and listen. Either through ignorance or inertia the great majority have permitted a small and entirely selfish minority to take over the highways for their own private gain.

"The 'Blot of the Month Club' prepares the names of the advertisers refusing to co-operate with the efforts to improve roadside conditions and have set up a 'White List' which carries the names of those advertisers who are co-operating. The advertisers are first written to by the clubs, associations and organizations and individuals requesting the removal of their billboards from the rural areas, and those who refuse to co-operate a campaign is launched where a boycott will be enforced against the offending advertisers."

Mrs. Fox asked that the Bucks County Association co-operate in this movement to have all members register their protests to the individual advertiser. This attack should be made, Mrs. Fox advised, not only directly against billboards in rural districts which disfigure the landscape, destroy property and menace the safety of the highways but junk yards and unsightly roadside stands and filling stations which are certainly equally objectionable.

Dr. H. W. Turner, New Hope, president of the Doylestown Fair Association, who has been closely connected with the advertising business for many years, asked the officers of the association "If they meant all billboards or just the objectionable billboards." He said that he was very much in favor of "controlled billboard advertising."

Then a member expressed the opinion that the association was on the right track, condemning billboards but that all efforts should be centered on zoning and planning and the billboard nuisance would automatically be eliminated.

"I agree with Moses Coyle that we are wasting a lot of time discussing the pros and cons of many issues instead of getting our educational and membership committees to work," declared President Bishop. "Let's get organized for zoning and planning. Every member of the association should enlighten himself on what zoning and planning means and then we will have no trouble in bringing in the members and fill this room."

Mr. Bishop also made it plain that he would be willing to work along with the association in the future, but that members should start to look for a new president for next year. He announced the next meeting for June 3rd.

William Yerkes, well known Buckingham farmer, also endorsed the remarks of Mr. Paxson and others. He had been appointed chairman of a committee on soil erosion under the zoning committee.

"If we are not careful in this association we are going to cover too much territory and queer the whole purpose of the organization," Mr. Yerkes declared. "Certainly there is little or no place in this association for a soil erosion committee when the United States government and other agencies have this very well covered. It seems to me that this association is growing to the proportions of a cure-all."

Moses Coyle spoke at length, and to the point, on the very most important note of the evening, "getting the public educated as to the advantage of zoning and planning first of all."

The Great Game of Politics

ed the original reorganization bill and denied the President the extraordinary powers he sought over the independent boards, the Civil Service system and the Auditing Department, did not feel like refusing what amounted to a personal request for more aid in doing his job.

HENCE, while the duties of these six secretaries, with that "passion for anonymity" cited in the original bill as a necessary qualification, are still shrouded in mystery; and while few persons profess to see how they can function without friction with members of the President's Cabinet and while unquestionably each of the six secretaries will have secretaries and clerks of his own, thus adding to the size and cost of the Federal bureaucracy—still, the President wanted them and now he has them. The next question is—who are they to be? It has been said that those gifted young leaders of the "inner circle," the Messrs. Corcoran and Cohen, can have two of these places for themselves if they desire, but their friends assert they would rather stay where they are—have a hand in making the selections rather than being selected.

PERHAPS so. There is, however, a belief that the President will pick the six largely from within his Administration rather than try to get successful men from outside. One reason for his belief is that it probably would be a little difficult to find six successful men outside to accept. For one thing most men who come under that classification are apt to be anti- rather than pro-New Deal. For another, the tenure of the jobs is too short to attract. At the most, they hardly would last more than a year and a half. It is extremely unlikely that the President who takes over in 1941 will retain Mr. Roosevelt's personal staff. No clear-headed man thinks Mr. Roosevelt will succeed himself. Quite obviously Mr. Roosevelt does not. According to recent and not-doubted publication, already he has cannily made arrangements for a well-paid writing job to start in January, 1941. His new secretaries could not well expect to hold on beyond that date.

ONE NAME recently mentioned which seems a likely selection is that of Mr. Lowell Mellet, head of the National Emergency Council. Mr. Mellet is an able, modest and sincere man. Personally, he is superior to most of the New Deal "bright boys" close to the President. As a Rooseveltian secretary he would seem to have the qualifications. Certainly, it would be a better post for him than head of the National Emergency Council, which many regard as the most useless and indefensible of the New Deal gadgets, certain to be abolished by the next President.

What Do You Know About Health?

By FISHER BROWN and NAT FALK

Answers: 1. German physiologist who was awarded the Nobel prize in 1910 for his fundamental research on chemistry and biology of the cell and particularly for his studies of the make-up of the nucleus of the cell. This nucleus is the vital portion of the cell; it is responsible for its development. 2. No. Some are reared for beef. 3. The Eskimo has the finest of teeth and bones. The reason for this is his diet. He lives on fat fish, fish livers and eggs of fish-eating birds. These foods, like Cod-liver oil, are rich in Vitamin D.

"The DOCTOR" by MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XLVIII
"Chris ought to get away soon," she told Ted Lawrence. "I'm worried about him, Ted. And if he wants that awful Mortimer place— You might talk to him about it."

"Why not do it yourself, Katie?" She shook her head. "No influence," she said. "I've lost all I had, if I ever had any."

That day, sitting soberly in what she had called her morning room, she told Ted flatly and without extenuation the story of her marriage.

"He didn't want me, of course," she finished. "He never has wanted me. I was a fool. I thought he might care if I gave him time enough. But he never did. Then lately, when I thought he might be better without me, I did this to him! I can't leave him now. I never can leave him, Ted."

Ted looked at her. Did she honestly feel that she could not leave Chris?

"I'm not sorry for myself," she said. "Don't think that, Ted. But I'm sorry for Chris. Desperately sorry. He wanted children, and I didn't." She shivered. "I was afraid. And of course he has always wanted somebody else. You know that, don't you? I just stood in the way, and I'm still in the way."

"If there is anything I can do—" he said awkwardly.

"Not unless you can turn the clock back!" she said with a touch of her old gallantry. But she was still Katie. "What's ahead of me, Ted?" she said. "I'm still young. He may stay in the country, and if I'm to be buried in that Mortimer hole, I'll go crazy. And I can't leave him now. We're tied together like two cats by the tail."

She was crying when he left her.

It was late spring when Chris finally faced forth into the world of living men again. Little by little he was becoming accustomed to his condition, could drive his own car, could sign his name with greater ease. But he knew he was through. He had built his reputation as a surgeon, but even if general practice had offered itself, it required two hands.

He spent the following days burning his bridges. He closed and gave up the downtown office, and submitted his resignation to the hospital, doing it at a staff meeting and standing rather wistfully but very calm.

He was surprised and moved when they did not accept it. They gave him a sabbatical year instead, and more if he needed it, and told him that he would be back among them long before that.

"Go away and play for a while," they said. "You've earned it."

By June he was ready to go. Katie was busy with a new apartment, fitting such furniture as she needed and selling the rest. When the day came for his departure, he stood with her in the hall. Piled about them were their laces and penates, which had never really been his; and his bags lay at his feet as they had that night a dozen years before when she had come in and he had taken her and married her. Now he looked down at her, a little heavy and not a little sulky. Then he bent down and kissed her.

"Try to understand what I'm doing, Katie," he said. "It has nothing to do with you or me. But I want some time. I've taken it on the chin, I suppose, and I've got to readjust somehow. I'll do that better by myself. At first, anyhow. After that I'll ask you to come and see me if you care to."

"Who will look after you?" "I think Hiram Mortimer has found a woman to do that."

"I see," she said sullenly. "A woman. Any woman but me!" That was their farewell.

Chris lay in Letitia's room in the Mortimer house. His right arm was on a pillow. When he turned in the night, he moved the pillow aside and placed his arm on it. Folded over the foot of the bed was Letitia's Star of Bethlehem quilt; beside him was a table with a lamp, a few books, and his pipe and tobacco; and across the room was the old maple bureau, with his splint on it.

The bed was wide, but there was a hollow on old David's side, and wherever Chris started at night, in the morning he would find himself in that hollow. He was there now. From outside came the early morning sounds of the country, cocks crowing, the deliberate movement of horse-drawn vehicles, some of it at a distance letting down bars for cows and calling softly to them:

"So, boss. So, boss. Come along. Get along, there."

Soon Mrs. Miller would come from her cottage near by, and he would hear her rattling the big coal stove in the kitchen.

He pulled up the sleeve of his pajama coat and looked at his arm. It seemed to him that the muscles already looked atrophied, and, lying there, he began to massage them awkwardly and patiently. The men in town had not wanted him to leave his treatments, but he had seen those treatments before. Either the nerve resumed its function, or it did not.

For the first few days, save to eat and sleep, Chris scarcely left the front porch. He sat there in David's big old chair, staring across the road at the waving wheat or the fluttering ribbons of the cornfields. He was possessed entirely by fatigue—a mental and physical collapse so great that even memory was dulled.

One day he looked down and saw a small dog sitting beside him. After that the dog came daily. Chris took to keeping part of his dinner for him and to watching for him. The dog would eat with dignity and then sit beside him, thinking the long quiet thoughts of his kind and asking nothing.

"Queer little devil," Chris thought. "All dogs are queer. Of all the beasts the only ones to forsake their kind and take up with us. God alone knows why."

It was the dog that broke through that apathy of his, for one day he took him for a walk. After that it was a settled matter. Chris striding on, the dog pursuing its own interests but coming back to his heels. It was companionship with no demands, and slowly Chris began to improve.

Then Noel came back from school, shy at first, sitting on the porch and making friends through the dog. "What's his name?" "I don't know. I would call him Caesar—I had a dog named Caesar once—but he's rather small for such a name."

Noel, sitting there in his blue overalls and looking up at him with Ursula's eyes under that blond thatch that was Jerry's. Anxious like the puppy to be friendly, and uncertain how to go about it. Very tactful about the arm, too. Chris was to wonder later whether the boy had not saved his reason, if not his life; for there were times when he contemplated making away with himself. It would be easy, quick and easy, and then one could sleep and never waken—unless, of course, one did waken somewhere else, as David had believed.

It was about that time that he began to take a drink at night in order to get to sleep. He had brought a bottle of Scotch with him, and after lying awake for hours he would get up, pour some into a glass, add a little plain water, and drink it. It would send a comfortable glow over him, then after a time it would act as a depressant. The blood would go out of his head; he would stop thinking and sleep.

When that bottle was exhausted, he got another from the village bootlegger. It was pure escape. He held it in his hand and looked at it, remembering the days of his city practice. Now it was he who was seeking release and forgetfulness.

With the coming of morning he would hear Noel's whistle. It was a whistle Chris had taught him. "All policemen have flat feet" were the unsung words behind it, and Noel was thrilled with it. Chris whistled back and got carefully out of bed. This was his life, the life he had chosen. Don't think. Don't remember. Don't even hope. Live this day as it comes, and every day.

Baby Sub-Debs Dress Up, Too, for Spring Parties

Dotted swiss with puff pockets

Bolero and babushka

Clothes for the smallest sub-debs have become smarter, too—just like mama's. The little girl on the left is doll-like in an imported dotted swiss daytime dress in rose pink. Pin-tucked net and ruffled lace edging trim collar, vestee panel and applied puff pockets and sleeves. The full-length party frock, center, is of snowy swiss organdy with tiny red and black embroidered patterning. Features are the brief bolero and demure babushka. Jane Withers, right, shows what's proper for a 10-year-old's tea party. Frock combines a skirt of dark blue crepe with bolero of lighter blue and a frilly blouse.

and Charlie Ruggles in their new picture together, "Boy Trouble," which opens locally at the Ritz Theatre today. For this gay, heart-warming story of family life is so realistically presented that every moviegoer is bound to recall something in his or her own experiences to match it.

Ruggles, cast as the type of character his fans like best, plays the "little man," the underpaid and overworked department store clerk, whose feud with his overlord's downstreet go hand in hand with his rows at home. Miss Boland, as engagingly nipped as ever, is his eccentric wife, who turns to adopting children when all other means of placating him fail.

But the children have quite the opposite effect from what Miss Boland expects. Ruggles determines to get rid of the first of them immediately and on his way back to the orphanage picks up another waif as the result of an automobile accident. Feeling that matters cannot be worse, he returns home with boy boys!

LANGHORNE NOSES OUT NEWTOWN ON THE TRACK

LANGHORNE, May 9—Langhorne High's cinderpathmen scored a close win over Newtown's tracksters on the former's runways here yesterday afternoon by a 35-33 count. The Indians led the Redskins after seven events, 33-30, but failure to present a relay team in the final event and a consequent forfeit of that event gave the home team the verdict by two points. However, Langhorne would have more than likely taken the mile relay anyway so it probably wouldn't have made any difference even if the race was run, as to the final outcome.

Summary of the meet:
100 yard dash: 1st, Corrigan, Langhorne, 2nd, Darcach, Newtown, 3rd, Lee, Langhorne. Time: 11.9 seconds. Score: Langhorne, 4; Newtown, 3.

HULMEVILLE

Burial of Mrs. Anna Witham, widow of Edward Witham, occurred in Beechwood Cemetery yesterday morning. Mrs. Witham, a former resident here, died in Virginia. The deceased and her family were during their residence here, active members of Grace Episcopal Church, and will be remembered by a number of residents. Mrs. Witham leaves one daughter, Lillian, who is connected with the Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Washington, D. C.

The Rev. and Mrs. M. Raymond Meredith entertained on Sunday friends from Wind Gap.

EDGELY

The Edgely Funful Girls will meet tonight at the home of Mrs. Fred Hibbs.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Stackhouse and children spent Sunday in Yardley visiting Mr. and Mrs. Harris Brown.

Recognized as Charley Ross
Phoenix, Ariz., May 9—Gustav Blair, 69-year-old Phoenix carpenter, was recognized legally today as the Charley Ross whose kidnapping in Germantown, Pa., 65 years ago, stunned the nation.

A Maricopa County Superior Court jury took only eight minutes yesterday to decide that Blair was Ross, as he claimed.

The establishment of identity came as the result of a civil action filed by Blair against Walter L. Ross, Sophia Ross, Marian K. Ross and Anne C. Ross, all of Germantown.

None of the defendants answered the complaint, and Superior Judge Rogers directed the jurors to decide in Blair's favor. Blair had contended the other Ross children had refused to recognize his claim.

In July, 1874, Charley, then four, and Walter Ross, about seven, were kidnapped from the Ross home in Germantown. The kidnappers demanded $20,000 for the return of Charley, after they had returned Walter, but the elder Ross refused to pay until Charley was brought back. For some unknown reason, the kidnappers failed to return Charley. Blair said he had determined he was the Ross child by family traditions, likeness, and by the fact that Lincoln C. Miller, Phoenix, whose family reared Blair, had been told that Blair was the kidnapped child.

Blair told the court he was not seeking to gain any inheritance, or property rights, "because all this is long since barred by time," but only wanted recognition.

Council Determined To Collect All Unpaid Water Accounts

Bath and other streets but would do so as soon as possible.

Tax collected was exempted from the collection of real estate taxes of 1938 in the sum of $14,656.40 which have been turned over to the county commissioners for collection.

Sewing project reported 2,668 garments had been distributed from the center. Council requested a more detailed report when Councilman DeGroot said he thought council should know as it was the borough's money which was being spent. President Wagner said that a detailed report was being compiled and would probably be ready for the June meeting.

A petition signed by 14 asked for a street light on Fifth avenue and that the surface of the street be repaired. Councilman Foster at this point stated that many of the streets in the fourth ward, west of Garden street, are in deplorable condition. "Heavy trucks and I am told even some professional men will not drive over these streets at night. They park their cars on Beaver street and then walk the rest of the distance." It was referred to street and highway committee with power to act.

Councilman DeGroot asked for a more rigid enforcement of the dog law and that dogs running at large be caught. Burgess Anderson informed Mr. DeGroot that the dog catcher is now functioning from time to time.

C. W. Winter presented a request for the privilege of hanging a sign at his place of business. Referred to street and highway committee with power to act. On motion of Councilman Warner a vote of thanks was extended to the Keystone Automobile Club for its assistance in mapping out traffic regulations here and the engineers of the Club are to be invited to visit Bristol and see how the plan is functioning.

Doylestown School Tax Is Set at 12 Mills

$1700 depending on training and professional preparation.

Mr. Halderman pointed out that no married woman teacher will receive an increment, with the exception of Mrs. Arthur Houk, who took special units of work.

Anthony A. Beshel, whose present salary is $1950 and whose salary next year will be $2000 because of an increment of $50, made possible by the salary schedule, was given an additional $50 in recognition of extra services he gives as a coach of the baseball and rifle teams.

The salary of Supervising Principal Halderman, which is now $3800, was increased $200 bringing it up to $4000. Wesley Bunting was re-elected treasurer of the board.

Whether or not the Doylestown School Board will introduce a vocational-agricultural department into the system depends whether it can obtain space to locate the home economics department in a cottage near the school.

Discussing the proposition of building a home economics cottage or purchasing a house in order to install into it a home economics unit, Mr. Halderman and the directors decided to continue investigating the possibilities.

"Unless we can find some place to locate the home economics department outside of the present school plant we cannot introduce a vocational department," Mr. Halderman explained.
